

This firm's data loads 80% more quickly. And it's 100% stable.

Background

If you conduct business in a data-driven environment, it's vital that your data systems work smoothly, quickly, and efficiently. Take, for example, the financial services firm whose employees were having trouble accessing time-sensitive reports from its multi-terabyte warehouse of data. The workers, reliant on a failing system, were handcuffed. Processing errors and data discrepancies only exacerbated the problem; attempts to reload data bogged down the system or brought it to a complete standstill. A fix was needed—and every minute counted.

Client's Business Problem

FYI Solutions' team of specialists quickly identified the underperforming processes—namely, the extraction, transformation, and loading of data (ETL). But instead of developing a patch to mask the system's flaws, FYI Solutions assessed the company's entire data warehouse and business intelligence environment. It evaluated all aspects of the system—including supporting processes such as project management and administration—and found a number of underperforming links in the chain.

Consider the benefits this international firm enjoyed by turning to FYI Solutions:

- An 80% improvement in the runtime of its key ETL processes
- More immediate access of data
- An optimized data warehouse and reporting environment
- Renewed confidence in the investment on the part of its key stakeholders
- A set of clear guidelines to ensure future success

"FYI was able to quickly assess our BI environment, understand our needs, and implement rapid performance improvements. We are very pleased with the caliber of the FYI team and the BI expertise they bring to the table. They deliver on their promises."

FYI Solutions

By focusing on the big picture, FYI Solutions was able to rebuild the failing processes without compromising the stability of the overall environment. The result? An 80% increase in the system's ETL speed and a more reliable, efficient system. Equally important, FYI handed the firm a roadmap of its environment—and the steps it needed to take for future success.

If you're working in a data-sensitive, time-critical environment, call the professionals that do more than simply patch a broken system. Call the people who sharpen your entire business intelligence system, optimize your performance, and provide a roadmap for your future. Call FYI Solutions..
